Editorial Comment

Rumors, rumors . . .

Rumors are always a nuisance to everyone. Loose talk, never substantiated, has resulted in untold grief, in great tragedies and irreparable damages.

No one really loves rumors. But rumors are told and retold avidly and people spreading rumors do so sometimes with sincerity without doubting the authenticity of the current stories.

Ever since the Japanese attack on Pearl Harbor, rumors were given out by responsible persons that sabotage by resident Japanese was largely responsible for the success of Japan's initial attack.

CAMBRIDGE ARCHIVE EDITIONS ONLINE

East View and Cambridge University Press have partnered to create an online resource of the Cambridge Archive Editions (CAE) East & Southeast Asia Collection. These rich historical reference materials on political, territorial, and ethnic issues are now available online.

From the 16th century onward, Great Britain established consulates wherever possible. In East and Southeast Asia, there were British officials in Beijing, Shanghai, Hong Kong, Singapore, Taiwan, Tokyo, and more, all in the effort to further trade relations. The by-product was a steady stream of written information and observations on the national heritage and political development of many countries, made at a local level. These reports were preserved, and are now online, as historically authentic documents in facsimile, as well as numerous maps. The material is particularly rich for the study of boundary formation, claims and disputes, allowing users to easily find unique insight in maps, government documents, and more.

Titles include the following sets from the CAE East & Southeast Asia Collection:

- China Political Reports 1911-1960: A collection of reports covering the rise of Communism in China and its effects over more than half a century.
- China Political Reports 1961-1970: This is the second part of an integrated series of political reports on China in the 20th century.
- Hong Kong Annual Administration Reports 1841-1941: A collection of administration and related reports covering the first 100 years of British rule in Hong Kong.

- Japan Political and Economic Reports 1906-1970: British diplomatic reports containing a continuous account of developments in Japanese history from 1906-1970.
- Korea Political and Economic Reports 1882-1970: All available diplomatic reports regarding Korea from the British National Archives.
